

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION REQUEST

Request Number: F-2013-04003

Keyword: Organisational Information/Governance

Subject: Compensation in Relation to Photographers

Request and Answer:

Question 1

How much has the Police Service of Northern Ireland paid in compensation to members of the public who were unlawfully/wrongfully arrested or stopped by officers while taking photographs in a public place relating to incidents that took place between 1 August 2010 and 30 July 2013?

Question 2

How many such compensation cases were there?

Question 3

If recorded on the electronic police database, what alleged offences did the stop/arrest relate to in each of these cases?

Question 4

How many claims were settled out of court and how much was paid in total?

Clarification received: Further to my FOI request, for the sake of clarity concerning question (1), please note that I am not seeking compensation information about people who have taken pictures 'of police incidents'. Rather, I am after information relating to unlawful/wrongful arrests or stops of members of the public while taking pictures in a public place between 1 August 2010 and 30 July 2013.

Answer

Criminal Justice Branch has advised that in general it is not an offence to take a photograph in a public place, however on occasion if it is connected with crime or terrorism then initially there must be grounds to suspect an offence and eventually this must be proven.

Searches were conducted by PSNI's Legal Services Branch (LSB) however these searches failed to locate any records or documents relevant to your request based on the information you have provided. Therefore, no such claims have been made. On receiving a claim LSB do not record why the individual was being arrested only that they are alleging it was unlawful. LSB do not record details of when members of the public may be stopped by a police officer in the course of their duty.

Accordingly, I have determined that the Police Service of Northern Ireland does not hold the information to which you seek access.
