

HOTELS

What to look out for

- Adult guests who appear secretive about their visit or trying to conceal that they are with a young person
- Adult guests refusing to leave their credit card and paying in cash
- Adult guests requesting a room that is isolated
- Numerous adults and young people coming to the hotel who do not appear to have a reason for being there or high levels of visitors to a guest room
- Guests who move in and out of the premises regularly at unusual hours
- Guests arriving and asking for a specific room number without knowing the name of the person who the room is under
- Adult guests who don't want their rooms cleaned or visited
- Adults accompanying a young person who appear to be under the influence, or looking frightened/uncomfortable
- An adult checking into a room and then returning later with a young person

Don't ignore your gut feeling that something is not right.
